Jadis porte orientale de l'empire britannique, Hong Kong est d'abord une ville chinoise, active jour et nuit, tournée vers la mer et le monde. Au fil de ses ruelles dominées par d'immenses gratte-ciel, découvrez son atmosphère et ses couleurs inimitables. En 1960 exactement, sous la sobre bannière des «Encyclopédie Casterman», paraissait une série de portraits de villes illustrés, spécialement conçus pour la jeunesse. Plébiscite immédiat, tant le travail d'illustration de ces ouvrages manifestait de talent, de modernité, de souffle et de poésie. L'auteur des images, Miroslav Sasek (1916-1980), allait s'imposer dès lors comme une référence majeure de l'illustration. Aujourd'hui encore, ces beaux albums (une première série de six livres avait inauguré la collection, suivie un peu plus tard, à partir de 1965, d'une seconde série de cinq) n'ont pas pris une ride ; inventifs, colorés et souvent souriants, ils demeurent remarquables de maîtrise et d'élégance. C'est la raison pour laquelle Casterman en propose aujourd'hui une nouvelle édition en fac-similé. Les ouvrages sont strictement conformes à l'édition d'origine, à un ajout près : une page supplémentaire en fin d'album resitue la ville traitée dans son contexte d'aujourd'hui. Après une première livraison de trois albums publiés simultanément en mars 2009 (Londres, Paris, Rome), suivis de deux titres en septembre (New York, Venise), voici donc, un an après la renaissance de cette belle collection, deux nouveaux titres : Hong Kong et San Francisco. Miroslav Sasek Né en 1916 à Prague, où il étudie l'architecture, Miroslav Sasek fuit la Tchécoslovaquie en 1948 et s'établit à Munich. Il travaille quelques années pour Radio Free Europe avant de se consacrer à l'illustration. Sa série de portraits de villes et de pays pour la jeunesse connaît un succès international (quatre de ses ouvrages deviennent des dessins animés). Sasek disparaît en Allemagne en 1980.
