"Pressestimmen The most influential thinker, in my life, has been the psychologist Richard Nisbett. He basically gave me my view of the world. (Malcolm Gladwell)[A] landmark book. The Geography of Thought shows that understanding of how individuals in eastern cultures think is not just nice, but necessary, if we wish to solve the problems we confront in the world today. We ignore the lessons of this book at our peril. (Robert J. Sternberg, president of the American Psychological Association)Westerners and Easterners see the world differently. Nisbett hopes that his work will change the way the cultures view each other. (New Scientist)Geography of Thought compares people from East Asia (Korea, China and Japan) with Westerners (from Europe, the British commonwealth and North America). Westerners typically see categories where Asians typically see relationships. Such differences in thinking can trip up business and political relationships (Wall Street Journal)A psychology professor dares to compare how Asians and Americans think. The upshot of Nisbett's research is that differences are real. They might not always be for the better, but they matter. (Forbes)The man whose ideas led to Malcolm Gladwell's Blink and to Nudge (The Times)This book may mark the beginning of a new front in the science wars. (Publishers Weekly)Cultural psychology has come of age and Richard Nisbett's book will surely become one of the canonical texts of this provocative discipline. The Geography of Thought challenges a fundamental premise of the Western Enlightenment - the idea that modes of thought are, ought to be, or will become the same wherever you go. (Richard A. Shweder, anthropologist and William Claude Reavis Professor of Human Development at the University of Chicago)An important, research-based challenge to the assumption widespread among cognitive scientists that thinking the world over is fundamentally the same. (Howard Gardner, Harvard University, author of Frames of Mind)The cultural differences in cognition, demonstrated in this ground-breaking work, are far more profound and wide-ranging than anybody in the field could have possibly imagined just a decade ago. The findings are surprising for universalists; remarkable for culturalists; and regardless, they are most thought-provoking for all students of human cognition. (Shinoba Kitayama, Faculty of Integrated Human Studies, Kyoto University) Werbetext Professor Nisbett shows in The Geography of Thought people actually think - and even see - the world differently, because of differing ecologies, social structures, philosophies, and educational systems that date back to ancient Greece and China, and that have survived into the modern world.
