"Pressestimmen 'Using extensive resources, meticulous research and a sophisticated conceptual framework, Elvire Corboz has given us an innovative study of transnational Shi'ism. She offers a fascinating portrait of the ways in which the Shi'i clergy uses institutional and philanthropic networks to construct and maintains its authority across national borders. The rich, nuanced and ecumenical portrait of the Shi'i marja'iyya in 'Guardians of Shi'ism' provides an important palliative to the sectarian lens that is all too often used to interpret Shi'ism in a narrow political and stereotypical manner.' -- Eric Davis, Department of Political Science, Rutgers University 'Elvire Corboz has written an impressive study of the proliferation of clerical authority in modern Shi'ism, where the classical transnational marja'iyya increasingly cooperates with institutional forms of representation. Based on intense and diligent fieldwork, it is well written and totally devoid of fashionable jargon; the bibliography is comprehensive, and the index cannot but be called exemplary. It is required reading for anyone dealing with contemporary Shi'ite Islam.' -- Rainer Brunner, Die Welt des Islams Über den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende Elvire Corboz earned a D.Phil from Wadham College, University of Oxford and has held positions at Princeton University and Rutgers University."
